Chapter 1541

The sun rose.

It was a new day.

When Serenity woke up, she realized her sister was already awake.

After Liberty was discharged, Serenity insisted that Liberty move into her and Zachary's house to keep an eye on her while she was recuperating.

Considering that she had to recuperate and take care of a three-year-old, Liberty agreed to her sister's request.

The mother and son moved into Zachary's villa on the hilltop temporarily

Liberty brought her son to take a walk in the garden.

During that season, Wiltspoon was starting to get hot. Many people could not resist turning on the air conditioner when the sun was up and blazing during the day.

However, it was still cooling in the morning.

Mornings in the villa were quiet. Liberty liked taking a walk in the garden in the mornings. She could exercise and admire the flowers at the same time.

Zachary was not a fan of flowers and plants. In the past, they simply existed to beautify the villa. However, the villa ended up being decorated into a garden.

It was because Serenity liked growing flowers.

Zachary moved over a wide variety of pretty flowering plants from the greenhouse of the manor. He planted them in the villa on the hilltop for his beloved wife to enjoy them every day.

That day was Sonny's day off. He did not need to go to the gym.

He was elated.

Although he had been going to the lessons for some time and gotten used to it, he still wanted to rest and cling to his mother occasionally.

"Mom."

Sonny stopped in front of a pot of flowers. He turned and asked his mother, "Mom, can I pluck this flower?"

"Why do you want to pluck it?"

Liberty did not reject her son immediately. Instead, she asked him the reason for wanting to do so.

Sonny's big eyes gleamed. He said, "I want to pluck the flower because I think it's pretty."

"What will you do after that?"

Sonny did not know what to reply.

Liberty squatted "You want to pluck the flower and play with it just because you think it's pretty, right?"

Sonny nodded

He had the urge to pluck the flower because it was blooming beautifully.

"If you think this flower is pretty, other people will feel the same too. If everyone plucks the flower because they think it's beautiful like you, there'll soon be no more flowers for everyone to admire.

"Do you like seeing an empty flower pot or plenty of flowers blooming on the stems?"

Sonny knew that his thought of wanting to pluck the flowers was wrong. His eyes still shone, but the expression on his innocent face showed he was aware of his mistake.

"Mom, I won't pluck flowers anymore. I'll leave the flowers blooming on their own so everyone can enjoy them."

Liberty caressed her son's face. She praised him gently, "You're a good boy. Whether you're in Aunt Ser's place or playing outside, remember not to pluck flowers, okay?"

Sonny nodded his head sensibly.

"Liberty."

Serenity heard her sister educating her nephew about a minor matter and walked over.

"Aunt Ser."

Sonny jogged toward Serenity with a smile.

Serenity lifted him.

“If you like flowers, how about I pluck one for you?”

Sonny shook his head. “Don’t pluck the flowers, Aunt Ser. That way, we can see blooming flowers every day.”

Serenity said to her sister with a smile, “Sonny understands everything right after he’s taught.”

“Children have to be educated from a young age. Humans are fundamentally good in nature upon birth. Everyone is like a sheet of blank paper at the start. It depends on how we, as parents, fill the paper up. Parents are the first teachers of children. Our words and actions will influence our children forever. “Why are you up so early and not sleeping in? The bookstore isn’t open today, right?”

“We won’t be open for a few days because school holidays start today. Liberty, your body hasn’t fully recovered. You should be lying down more.”

Serenity put Sonny down. He raced ahead energetically while the sisters strolled behind him.

“My bones will grow moldy if I keep lying down. I don’t feel any discomfort now. It’s just some itch and pain from my wound.

“I’ll have to return to manage All You Can Eat after Jasmine visits her family.”

Serenity and Liberty would be having a meal with the Sox family when Jasmine returned to visit them after their wedding day.

After that, Josh would take Jasmine on their honeymoon.

He had two months of marriage leave.

While the sisters were walking, a maid came over and said respectfully, “Missus, Mr. Lewis is here.”

Upon hearing the maid’s words, Serenity looked toward her sister instinctively.

Liberty said indifferently. "Seren, whether he comes or not, it has nothing to do with me."

Duncan was holding back when she was still in the hospital. He did not want her to be distracted by relationship matters while recuperating.

Once Liberty was discharged, Duncan stopped suppressing his feelings for her.

Even a fool could tell that he was pining for her.

Every time Duncan saw Liberty, his fiery gaze would always follow after her.

"Duncan is here for you," Serenity said. Next, she said to the maid, "Go and check if Zachary is awake. If he isn't, have Sam invite Mr. Lewis into the house and attend to him as our guest. My sister and I still wish to walk a little longer."

Her sister did not accept Duncan's feelings.

She was on her sister's side.

The maid replied respectfully and carried out Serenity's instructions.

Everyone was used to Duncan coming over early in the morning for free breakfast.

Even without Serenity's instructions, Mr. Lewis's car could enter the villa freely.

Before Duncan parked the car, he saw from afar that Serenity and Liberty were taking a walk and admiring the flowers

When he took another look after parking the car, he could not spot them anymore.

He was not in a rush to go over to them.

He got out of the car and asked Sam, who was out to welcome him, "Sam, is Zachary still sleeping?"

"Mr Zachary got a little drunk last night. He hasn't woken up yet."

Sam smiled and said, "You may come inside to wait, Mr Lewis. Mr Zachary should be up soon."

The missus was already strolling in the garden.

Mr. Zachary would not be able to stay asleep for long.

After getting drunk, he would sulk if he could not see the missus the next morning.

In the past, everyone would feel anxious whenever Zachary sulked. It was as if the end of the world was upon them.

However, everyone was no longer afraid because Missus was there. They were simply guessing how long it would take for the man of the house to wake up sulkily.

“Sure.”

Duncan followed Sam into the house.

The moment he stepped inside, he saw Zachary, who was about to come downstairs.

Zachary’s face was tense with a serious expression on it. It was just as Sam predicted.

He had felt a headache when he woke up after getting drunk the night prior. Before he opened his eyes, he let out a groan on purpose so that his wife would coddle him.

It turned out that his wife was long gone. He touched her spot under the duvet, and it was chilly. It meant. Serenity had woken up very early.

Zachary was used to being prioritized. He hoped Serenity would revolve around him, especially when he was feeling uncomfortable.

However, Serenity would be the last person to revolve around him.

Upon seeing his friend, who had come over bright early in the morning and even before he got downstairs, Zachary’s expression turned grimmer.

Only Duncan could walk to the sofa and sit calmly without caring about Zachary’s stern expression.

“You didn’t sleep well last night?” Duncan asked his friend out of concern.

He saw Zachary coming downstairs with a tense face. Zachary walked over and sat on the single-seated sofa.

“Didn’t you get drunk last night?” Zachary returned a question.

Duncan smiled. He said, “I only drank two glasses. I didn’t get drunk.”

After a pause, he added, "You all have someone taking care of you after getting drunk. I'm single—I have no one to take care of me even if I get wasted, so I didn't dare to drink so much."

Zachary scoffed. "Ms. Harmon would've been happy to take care of you."

With the mention of Lily, the smile on Duncan's face faded.

"Nothing will happen between Lily and I. She has moved out of my house too."

Lily was prepared to leave Wiltspoon.

The partnerships she had been negotiating were more or less settled.

When Mrs. Lewis started trying harder to get Lily and Duncan together, Lily told her the truth that she had not been wooing Duncan lately. Duncan's attention was not on her. She did not want to put in any more. meaningless effort.

Her trip to Wiltspoon was fruitful. It was time for her to return home.

"Your mom doesn't think so. You're here this early for my sister-in-law, right? She said she has no feelings for you."

Duncan said patiently, "I know Liberty doesn't have feelings for me, but this doesn't affect me from pursuing her."

"It's fine as long as I'm interested in her."

Zachary glared at him.

Duncan chuckled.

Sam poured him a glass of water.

"Sam, where's your missus?" Zachary asked.

Sam said, "Missus and Ms. Hunt are taking a walk and admiring the flowers in the garden with Sonny."

Zachary hummed a response and did not ask more.

He stood and left Duncan to walk out of the house. It was obvious that he was going to look for Serenity

Duncan followed after him brazenly.

Zachary turned to glance at Duncan. He said, "Why are you following me?"

Duncan smiled. "I miss Sonny I want to see him."

They walked together and soon met the sisters, who were walking back.

"Sonny"

Duncan called out.

"Dunc."

Sonny did not know Duncan wished to be his father Upon seeing Duncan coming over, the child ran toward him excitedly

"Sonny, come here. Let Uncle Zak carry you."

Sonny did run over, but the person who carried him was Zachary,

Duncan had already squatted and opened his arms. He was waiting for Sonny to throw himself into his arms, but Zachary came in between them.

The sisters walked over.

"Mr. Lewis," Serenity greeted Duncan politely.

He acknowledged her greeting with a smile and looked toward Liberty.

"Good morning, Mr. Lewis," Liberty greeted calmly.

She faced his gaze openly without avoiding it too.

Duncan saw the calmness in Liberty's eyes.

She truly was not interested in him at all.

That knowledge made Duncan feel defeated, but he soon got over it.

Liberty had experienced a failed marriage before. Her ex-husband's family was also pestering her at that moment. She was repulsed by love and marriage as a result.

Duncan would need a long time to melt Liberty's heart and make her believe in love and marriage again.

He also gave himself a few years to pursue her and wait for her reply.

He was not in a rush anyway

He was willing to keep waiting unless Liberty got married to someone else.

"Good morning, Liberty."

Duncan returned Liberty a greeting.

As he walked, he complained to his wife, "Honey, I was drunk last night and woke up with a headache this morning. I think my headache worsened because I couldn't see you after opening my eyes."

Serenity hooked his arm and said softly, "I didn't wake you up because you were sleeping soundly Does your head still hurt? You can continue sleeping after breakfast It's the holidays. You can get a good rest"

"Come and rest with me.

"Okay I'll be with you."

The unhappiness Zachary felt when he did not see his wife upon waking up completely dissipated.

He was that easy to coax.

Duncan watched Liberty and asked concernedly, "How are you feeling today. Liberty?"

"I'm doing fine. Thank you for your concern, Mr. Lewis," Liberty replied formally.

After a moment of silence, Duncan said, "Liberty, you've become a lot colder toward me."

"That's not true. I've always treated you like this, Mr. Lewis."

Liberty gazed at Duncan calmly. "You've helped me out a lot I feel grateful to you. Why will I be cold to you?"

She seemed as if she had not changed, but she did. She was cold and distant to him.

“Liberty, I really like you.”

Duncan confessed his feelings in front of her.

Liberty was still calm. “Thank you for your love, Mr. Lewis. However, I’m not interested in relationships right now. Please stop thinking about me. It’s a waste of time. You and Ms. Harmon are a good match, Mr. Lewis.”

“It’s true that Lily and I have equal social status and background. Our mothers are best friends too. My mom has been trying hard to get Lily and me together, but I don’t feel attracted to her at all.”

Duncan looked toward Liberty with a serious gaze. He said earnestly, “Liberty, I’m not a young and rash. boy anymore. I’m thirty–six. I’m clear about what I want and know what I’m doing.

“Every word I say comes from my heart. I know you’re not interested in relationships now I can wait. I just hope that you’ll treat me as usual and not be cold and distant to me.”

Liberty met his gaze and said, “I’m not avoiding the problem, Mr Lewis. I simply don’t have feelings for you, so I don’t want to give you false hope and waste your time.

“Mr. Lewis, I’m a divorced woman. I’m not saying that divorced women don’t have the right to pursue love again. It’s just that I don’t believe in love anymore. I don’t want to be involved in romantic relationships Running my breakfast diner and earning money to raise Sonny is enough for me.

“I know you’re not being impulsive or fooling me, but we really don’t suit each other. Please don’t waste your efforts on me anymore, Mr. Lewis. You’re a great guy. If you’re willing to turn your gaze elsewhere. you’ll find a better girl who suits you more than I do.”

Liberty had no doubt that Duncan liked her.

However, she was no longer a young girl who was inexperienced in love. She would not jump into a relationship rashly.

Apart from the existing difference between she and Duncan, the fact that Mrs. Lewis disliked her also stopped her from falling in love.

Liberty had finally managed to escape the conflicts she had had with her in–laws. She never wanted to have a headache or get angry over issues with her in–laws again.

Why would she make things difficult for herself again?

Moreover, she truly had no feelings for Duncan.

She never thought of becoming a couple with him.

“If you’ll excuse me, Mr. Lewis.”

Liberty said apologetically, “I’ll be heading into the house first.” After speaking, she walked past Duncan.

Duncan stood still. He silently watched as Liberty walked past him.

He only left after some time.

He had preempted what would happen after he confessed to Liberty.

He was also mentally prepared to wait several years for Liberty to develop feelings for him.

Upon entering the house, Duncan received a concerned gaze from his friend.

Zachary did not ask any questions as Duncan seemed alright. He just called him over to have breakfast together.

He patted Duncan’s shoulder and whispered, “It’s okay. Take it slow.”

Duncan smiled and said, “I’m not in a rush. I have a lifetime to spend on her.”

He would not give up as long as Liberty did not get married to someone else. “Sonny is an important piece,” Zachary whispered.

Duncan hummed in agreement. “I know. I like Sonny from the bottom of my heart.”

He had liked Sonny even before he fell in love with Liberty, let alone now

“Let’s go and have breakfast.”

Zachary invited his friend to eat together.

Serenity and Liberty had already brought Sonny to the dining area.

Duncan did not restrain himself whenever he was at Zachary's place. It was as if he was returning to his own home.

It was the weekends followed by the holidays.

After breakfast, Zachary planned to bring his wife back to the manor to accompany Grandma May.

Liberty and Sonny tagged along too.

"I'm free anyway I haven't seen Grandma May for some time. I miss her a lot. I'll go with you all, Zachary." Actually, Duncan had seen Grandma May just yesterday.

She was even laughing excitedly during Josh and Jasmine's wedding.

Although Josh was not her grandson, he was good friends with Zachary. The Buchams and Yorks were also close, so she treated Josh as her own grandson.

Grandma May was happy that Josh had found his happiness.

As Zachary lifted Sonny into the car, he told Duncan, "Your legs are yours—I can't possibly stop you if you want to go."

Duncan looked toward Liberty. He hoped she would take his car.

However, Liberty did not notice that she sat in the same car as her son.

Zachary and Serenity shared a car.

Duncan could squeeze into Liberty's car but gave up after thinking about it.

He could still see Liberty and Sonny if he followed them to Wilridge Manor.

Not long after, several cars exited the villa and headed toward the manor.

Meanwhile, in the Newmans' house, Camryn did not expect Callum would actually come over early in the morning to give her a ride to work.

She was about to head out in her family's car, but Callum's car was parked horizontally in front of the villa's gates.

No matter how many times the driver honked, he would not budge.

"Ms. Newman, Mr. York refuses to move his car. We won't be able to go out."

The driver gave up on honking. He turned his head to talk to Camryn.

Callum got out of his car.

He leaned against his car with hands in his pockets. He stared at Camryn's car. He was waiting for Camryn to admit defeat.
